The 7th Heaven star and her investor beau celebrate amore on Italy's Amalfi Coast courtship While attending Loyola Marymount University in L.A. in 2000, Beverly Mitchell, 28, met Michael Cameron, 28, at a friend's party. That night, Cameron got involved in a scuffle and wound up with a black eye—but Mitchell came to the rescue with a bag of frozen peas. "I was his knight in shining armor," she says. "I knew then that we'd be together forever."

proposal After dating for five years, the couple bought property in Crested Butte, Colo. On New Year's Eve 2005, Cameron arranged for a horse-drawn sleigh ride on their new land and pulled out all the stops: With a bottle of Cristal on hand to ease his nerves, he whipped out a 3.5-carat, starburst-cut yellow diamond engagement ring with .75-carat half-moons. "It was snowing, and the moment couldn't have been more perfect," he says.

ceremony On October 1, 2008, the 104 guests gathered at the Santa Maria a Gradillo church in Ravello, Italy. The couple accidentally swapped identical vows: "I called her my husband!" Cameron says.

reception Planner Michael Russo of Roses n Lollypops Event Planning and Design held cocktail hour on the terrace of Villa Cimbrone. Guests then moved inside for the reception, where "each table was named after one of our favorite romantic movies," says Mitchell, including Knocked Up and Pretty Woman. The newlywed's table? Naturally, the story of a "regular" guy falling for a famous actress—Notting Hill. —RACHEL JACOBY
