ROBERT EVANS

"I believed they would be together for the rest of their lives — I was so sad when they broke up."

Brad and Jen had the perfect wedding

Shooting Brad Pitt and Jennifer Aniston's July 29, 2000, wedding was "a once-in-a-lifetime experience for me," California photographer Robert Evans tells In Touch about the day the stars pledged their love at a private estate in Malibu overlooking the Pacific Ocean. "One moment I will never forget is watching Brad get ready. He was a little nervous, but mostly calm. Just before the ceremony, he had his knees on the back of a couch, bent over on a windowsill, writing his vows out — wearing just pants. Amazing memories. I was also with Jen right before she walked down the aisle — it was so important to her that Brad didn't see her dress ahead of time. She didn't want there to be any bad luck." Adds Evans, "After I gave them the photos, Brad and Jen were very gracious and sent wine and a lovely thank-you note."

A PRIVATE AFFAIR FOR 200 GUESTS
Lanterns and brown-sugar candles from Thailand illuminated the reception tent, which held 50,000 flowers, four bands and a dance floor.

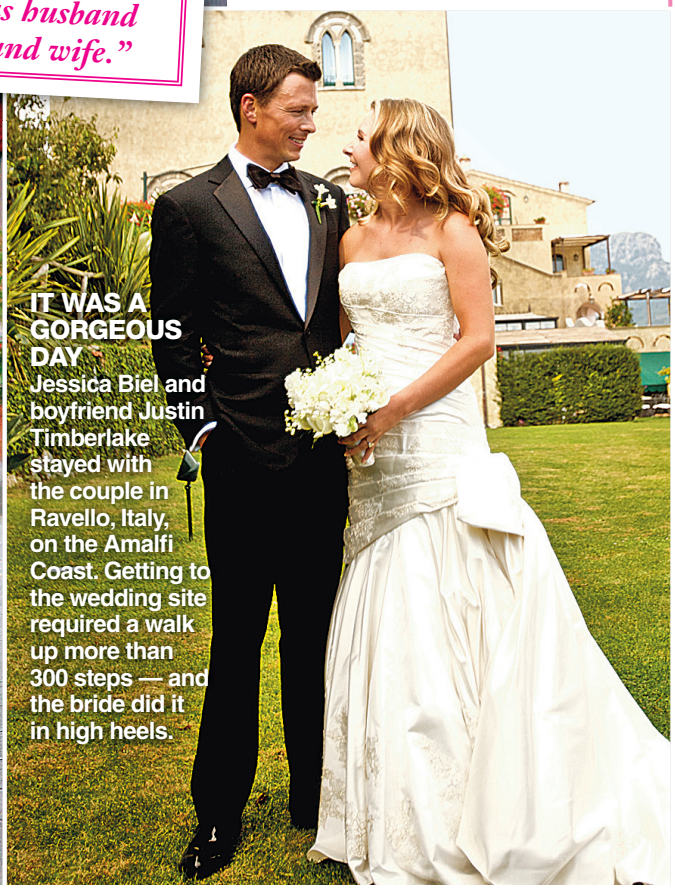
Beverley's big day was so romantic

There were many celebrities at Beverley Mitchell's October 2008 wedding to accountant Michael Cameron, but "it had such a happy, family-style, intimate feel to it," their wedding photographer, Anthony Vazquez, shares with In Touch. Jessica Biel (who played Beverley's sister on 7th Heaven) was a bridesmaid, and 'NSyncers Justin Timberlake and Joey Fatone were guests. Vazquez, who met the couple through celebrity party planner Michael Russo (rosesnlollipops.com), says, "Bev and Michael got married in one of the most romantic villas in all of Italy. Beverley was so amazing to work with. She was willing to do anything — she actually jumped into the Mediterranean with her wedding dress on! She spent lots of time laughing on her wedding day — which was great — and we got a beautiful shot, which I love, of them gazing at each other in front of the villa. It was amazing."

"Bev cried as she and Michael danced their first dance as husband and wife."



IT WAS A GORGEOUS DAY Jessica Biel and boyfriend Justin Timberlake stayed with the couple in Ravello, Italy, on the Amalfi Coast. Getting to the wedding site required a walk up more than 300 steps — and the bride did it in high heels.
