

Kevin Jonas says 'I do'

The Jonas Brothers guitarist marries his 'Jersey Girl,' Danielle Deleasa, in a fairytale ceremony at a castle

"What I'm most excited about is being with my best friend every day," says Kevin.

Kevin Jonas was determined to make his bride, Danielle Deleasa, feel like Cinderella on their wedding day. So, on the snowy afternoon of Dec. 19, as the couple dressed on opposite sides of a French-style chateau in Huntington, New York state, this Prince Charming sent his "princess" an unforgettable gift: a pair of glass slippers in her size. "I couldn't believe it," says self-described "Jersey Girl" Danielle, who has always loved the classic fairytale. "The whole time I've dated Kevin, I never imagined this." Kevin, meanwhile, spent his last single minutes with his band of brothers. "It was me, Nick and Joe in my room," recalls Kevin. "It was a moment we'll remember forever, because it was the last time before I was married with the three brothers."

Despite a blizzard outside, it was a day and night filled with monumental moments for Kevin, 22, and Danielle, 23, who wed under a white tent at Long Island's Ohoka Castle that resembled an enchanted forest with 25,000 white roses, orchids and hydrangeas. Before the bride, in a tulle and Chantilly-lace Vera Wang gown, walked down the aisle with her father, Thomas "Bucky" Deleasa, she says, "I was adjusting my veil, and I started crying before I got to the aisle." Her groom, in a Brooks Brothers tux, was just as emotional. "When I saw her, I lost it," he says. "Once I lost it, it was like a tidal wave." Best men Joe and Nick choked up, as did Danielle's maids of honour, sisters Dina and Katie, and many of the 400 guests. The young couple, who met while on holiday in the Bahamas with their families in 2007 (but crossed paths at church events in New Jersey as children), exchanged wedding bands and recited vows administered by Kevin's father, Kevin Sr, who is an ordained minister and Danielle's childhood pastor.

Kevin says the brothers are happy to have another Jonas around. "Now they've got a sister and I've got a wife ... I like the sound of that."

When Beyoncé's "Single Ladies" came on, Kevin told Joe, "You better get on the dance floor."

"Joe and I gave the yin and yang of toasts," says Nick, conceding his was more serious.

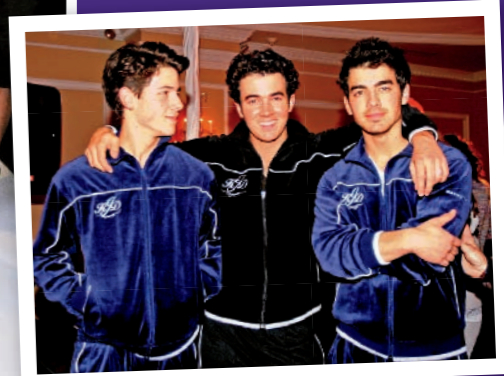

Celeb guests such as Demi Lovato and Joey Fatone (above) and Jordyn Sparks partied to tunes spun by Questlove.

"I could've gotten married the day after we got engaged. We'd have gone crazy waiting any longer," said Kevin.

ROLLERSKATE REHEARSAL

The weekend kicked off with the Jonases hosting an Italian-style rehearsal dinner and after-party with dishes created by celeb cook Paula Deen. The guests—decked out in tracksuits with Kevin and Danielle's initials—then laced up shiny new skates for a spin around the dance floor turned roller rink. Says Joe: "We skated all night."
